THE BIG IDEA

QNU LABS

Building a quantum shield

SUNIL GUPTA IS WORKING ON DEFENDING AGAINST A THREAT MOST PEOPLE DON'T YET UNDERSTAND

ANEES HUSSAIN

"I WAS ALWAYS EXCITED about scientific discoveries and hero stories," Sunil Gupta reflects, recalling his childhood in Delhi where he devoured comic books—Mandrake, Spiderman, Superman—all with special powers helping out common people. Four decades later, as founder and CEO of QNu Labs, Gupta is building India's quantum cryptography shield to defend against a threat most people don't yet understand.

In today's world, every password, WhatsApp text, bank transaction, military communication, Aadhaar record, are all protected by encrypted mathematical locks that would take current computers millions of years to break. Now imagine a computer that could break those same locks in minutes. That's the quantum computing revolution. And it's not science fiction anymore. "Everyone talks about quantum computing as the weapon," Gupta explains. "We're building the defence."

Gupta's first breakthrough came from an unlikely coincidence. Then a fresh B.Tech Computer Science graduate from NIT Tiruchirappalli, Gupta met someone building India's first minicomputer standing in a queue at Pratapghar in Delhi, in 1986. Within 24 hours, he was hired as employee number three at Televista Computers. He went on to have a long corporate career of over 25 years which included: eight years at C-DOT building the Rural Automatic Exchange (RAX), a type of telephone exchange system designed specifically to provide automatic telephone service to rural and remote areas where it wasn't economical to install full-scale urban telephone exchanges, eventually connecting 40,000 villages; twelve years at Hughes Software Systems developing satellite communication; and around 4 years at Infosys. In 2008, he had pitched a custom-built mobile app to ICICI Bank when their top executive asked, "What do you do with mobile app?" Throughout, he was always building early, pushing boundaries.

The turn to quantum-led cybersecurity came from a simple realisation: "Current systems are designed to be a cat and mouse game, purposely, so we are always in the chase." The solution? "Let's use future technology which is going to come after 20 years, and use that technology to solve cybersecurity problems."

In August 2018, QNu Labs was formally born. Gupta hadn't known his co-founders previously. Anil Prabhakar, an IIT Madras professor, would handle the quantum physics foundation. Srinivasa Rao Aluri brought deep technical expertise. Mark Mathias, with his private equity background, would guide funding and scaling. And Prithvi Kini would lead hardware and electronics development. Gupta himself would drive software and business strategy.

Taking a contrarian approach defined everything they did. When investor Vishesh Rajaram of Speciale Invest couldn't build conviction after three years of following them, Gupta invited him to their internal strategy meeting. Rajaram stayed for hours, finally convinced and wrote them their first cheque.

For years, QNu existed in superposition. Simultaneously too early and exactly where they needed to be. While they continued to make technical breakthroughs through the years, validation came earlier this year when the government's National Quantum Mission (NQM) invested in their Series A round of ₹60 crore, with NQM contributing ₹25 crore. Six months after the NQM investment, they proved the faith was justified by delivering the world's first 500-kilometer Quantum Key Distribution (QKD), "which nobody in the world has done."

The larger mission of protecting India's critical infrastructure is also already well underway: QNu is providing quantum cybersecurity for all of India's armed forces, marking them as the defence establishment's trusted quantum security partner. Next it is looking at securing banking, telecom, and power grid systems.

"This year, finally, some of the government bodies who certify these products came to the table. STQC, SAG, and defence units are now evaluating quantum technology, with certifications expected by October. This will fasten a lot of the deals that are in the pipeline amounting to about ₹70-80 crore." Recent wins also include a deal with a large Indian payment gateway and a US defense contractor who's using QNu's Quantum Random Number Generator (QRNG) as part of their solution. Their US subsidiary, QNU (branded as ENQASE), has already raised $2.5 million and is targeting enterprise customers in America and Europe. Having raised around $25 million so far, QNu is preparing for its next leap, another $25 million Series B round planned for early next year. The funds will be split strategically: $10-15 million for R&D, critical projects, and filing another 50 patents to reach their target of 100 by next year; and another $10 million for go-to-market expansion across West Asia and US, building experience centres, and customer success teams.

The timing is just right as "harvest now, decrypt later" attacks are already happening, where adversaries store encrypted data today, waiting for quantum computers powerful enough to crack it open tomorrow. Industry experts predict these quantum threats could crack open as early as 2028. China is pouring billions into quantum research. The US has declared it a national security priority. India too has set as the deadline for implementing post-quantum cryptography in critical sectors. Every hero faces that moment when they must step up beyond conviction and take action. For QNu Labs and India's quantum future, that moment is now.

Sunil Gupta, QNu Labs co-founder and CEO

20 killed in Darjeeling as landslides wreak havoc

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Darjeeling (WB), October 5

AT LEAST 20 people, including children, were killed as relentless rain triggered one of the worst landslides in a decade across Mirik and Darjeeling hills on Sunday, sweeping away homes, cutting off roads, isolating villages, and leaving hundreds of stranded tourists amid widespread devastation, officials said.

According to reports compiled by the National Disaster Response Force (NDRF) and the district administration, fatalities were reported from several locations - Sarsaly, Jasbargaon, Mirik Basti, Dhar Gaon (Mechi), Nagrakata and the Mirik Lake area.

North Bengal Development Minister Udayan Guha described the situation as "alarming". "As of now, the death toll is 20. It is likely to go up," Guha told PTI.

According to the NDRF, 11 people died in Mirik, the worst-affected zone, while seven injured have been rescued from debris.

In Darjeeling subdivision, seven people were killed, even as rescue teams were working round-the-clock in coordination with police, local administration, and disaster response units.

Rescue operation underway after landslides hit the area following heavy rainfall, in Darjeeling, on Sunday

"Seven deaths have been reported due to a major landslide in Darjeeling subdivision triggered by heavy rainfall since last night," Darjeeling sub-divisional officer (SDO) Richard Lepcha said.

The landslides, described by officials as the worst since 2015 landslide which killed nearly 40 people in Darjeeling, have left behind a trail of devastation.

Entire slopes have caved in, highways buried under thick mud, and communication lines snapped.

The Mirik-Sukhiapokhri road, a key lifeline connecting several hamlets, remains blocked.

Hundreds of tourists who had thronged the hills for Durga Puja and post-festive vacations found themselves marooned amid the chaos. Families from Kolkata, Howrah, and Hooghly — visiting Mirik, Ghoom, and Lepchajagat — were forced to stay indoors as the hills were battered by torrential rain since Saturday night.

Air India 787 RAT deploys, lands safely

IN A MAJOR incident involving an Air India plane, Ram Air Turbine, which is usually used in case of engine failures, got deployed without any command from a Boeing 787-8 Dreamliner aircraft a few minutes before landing at the Birmingham airport on Saturday, according to officials.

Aviation watchdog DGCA is probing the incident involving aircraft VT-ANO operating the flight AI117 from Amritsar to Birmingham on October 4.

The plane landed safely, the officials said on Sunday.

Generally, RAT gets deployed automatically in the eventuality of a dual engine failure or electrical/electronic or hydraulic failure, among others.

It uses wind speed to generate emergency power.

The incident has also raised safety concerns, with the Federation of Indian Pilots (FIP) urging DGCA to carry out thorough checks and investigate the electrical system of all Boeing 787 aircraft in the country.

The deployment of RAT also assumes significance against the backdrop of the crash of an Air India Dreamliner that killed 260 people on June 12.

After the fatal accident also, concerns were raised in some quarters about the safety of Dreamliners and some reports had suggested that RAT was deployed prior to the crash, which happened soon after take-off. In a statement on Sunday, an Air India spokesperson said the operating crew of flight AI117 from Amritsar to Birmingham on October 4 detected deployment of RAT of the aircraft during its final approach. —PTI

Tourism to support 90 mn new jobs by 2035: WTTC

THE INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL and tourism sector will support 91 million new jobs in the next 10 years, accounting for one in every three jobs created globally, according to a report by the World Travel & Tourism Council (WTTC).

Demographic and structural shifts could create a workforce shortfall of more than 43 million people if left unaddressed, says the report, 'Future of the Travel and Tourism Workforce', which focused on 20 economies.

The Council works with governments on issues of the travel and tourism industry, and is the global authority on the economic and social contribution of the sector.

The report, released at the 25th WTTC Global Summit in Rome recently, is based on extensive global research, including a large-scale survey of business leaders and in-depth interviews with the tourism body's members and other key stakeholders, a release said.
